Research for Improved Health: Case Study Questionnaire

Please consider the following table:

Types of Trust	Defining Characteristic
Critical Reflective Trust	Trust, in this partnership, is at the place where mistakes and other issues resulting from differences (in culture; power) can be talked about and resolved.
Proxy Trust	Members of this partnership are trusted, because someone who we trust invited them, therefore we trust them.
Functional Trust	Members of this partnership are working together for a specific purpose and timeframe, but mistrust may still present.
Neutral Trust	We are still getting to know each other; there is neither trust nor mistrust.
Unearned Trust	Trust, is based on member's title or role with limited or no direct interaction prior to this project. Examples of title or roles may include: a community outsider, a physician, or community organizers.
Proxy Mistrust	Members of this partnership are not trusted because someone who we do not trust invited them, therefore we mistrust them.
No Trust	Members of this partnership do not trust each other. It is likely that trust will not develop.
